JOHN CALKINS COIT

June 27, 1799—February 6, 1863

Preface

Seventy years have passed since the publication of the "Coit Genealogy" by Rev. F. W. Chapman. During this period the family has grown to huge proportions. Some two years ago, the writer became interested in the project of bringing down to date one branch of the family, including as many as possible of the descendants of the writer's grandfather the Rev. John Calkins Coit of Cheraw, South Carolina. Aside from presenting the direct male line of ancestry back to John Coit who emigrated from Wales to America in 1635, and (through John Calkins Coit's mother Betsy Calkins Coit), the line of ancestry back to William Brewster, who came to America in the Mayflower in 1620; no effort has been made to trace backward other lines of ancestry.

Some records have become faded, some handwriting is difficult to read, and the memories of some individuals have, with passage of the years, become somewhat blurred. However, while a serious effort toward accuracy has been made, it must be kept in mind that complete freedom from error is impossible in a work of this kind. It is hoped that readers may be lenient towards such errors as may be noted.

No work of this kind could be accomplished without interested cooperation by many members of the family. Such has been accorded most liberally by a very large number of persons, and is sincerely appreciated. Especial thanks are due those who have rendered outstanding assistance. Among these may be mentioned particularly: Mrs. Samuel Archibald Malloy of Ferris, Texas; Mrs. Henrietta Malloy Watson of San Francisco; Mr. William McMillan Malloy of Ferris, Texas; Mrs. Henrietta Coit Malloy Pitts of Coleman, Texas; Rev. William Charles Malloy of Dunedin, Florida; Mr. Harry Winthrop Malloy of Laurinburg, North Carolina; Mrs. Henrietta Coit Malloy Meiklejohn of Cheraw, South Carolina; Mr. Henry Campbell Coit of Dallas, Texas; Miss Mary Johnston Coit of Banner Elk, North Carolina; Mrs. Ellen Coit Brown Elliott of Palo Alto, California; Mr. Edmund Fowler Brown of Columbia, Missouri; and the Rev. George Coit Moore of Mt. Pleasant, Texas.

The arrangement of the work differs somewhat from the conventional in that less abbreviations and key figures are used. The descendants of each of the children of John Calkins Coit are grouped together, each generation being indicated by Roman numerals, e.g., all brothers and sisters in the same family have the same numeral. It may appear to some that giving the full names of the parents after each child is unnecessary repetition. This may be true from the point of view of those familiar with conventional genealogical method. For the uninitiated, however, who use the book casually from time to time, it is felt that such repetition may be well worth while. In like manner the maiden names of married women are added in black face. Another innovation is the inclusion, wherever known, of the present postal address of adults.

In conclusion the hope is expressed that this work may serve to draw the family more closely together, renew old acquaintanceships, and that the contemplation of the life achievements of those who have been most successful may spur many to still greater endeavors. It has been said that "The inheritance of a good name is a responsibility as well as a matter of pride".

Old Country Home of the Coits

*In Grove's "Antiquities of England and Wales", Vol. 7, page 76, is a description of Coity Castle, (spelled also Coite). In the description of Glamorganshire is the following:

"The exact time when this castle was erected seems uncertain, though, in all likelihood it was built about the year 1091, by Payanus de Tuberville, one of the twelve Norman Knights who under Robert Fitzhamon seized the Lordship of Glamorgan. In dividing the Lordship of Glamorgan among themselves, the Lordship of Coity, with its appendages, fell to Sir Payanus de Tuberville. The Lordship of Coity remained in the family of the Tubervilles for many generations."

John Coit, the first of the name in America, came over, probably, from Glamorganshire, Wales, in 1635. He had married Mary Jenners in the Old Country where all their seven children were born previous to their emigration to America. Four of the children, John, Joseph, Mary, and Martha, accompanied their parents to America. John Coit first settled at Salem, Mass., but moved to Gloucester, and later to New London, Conn. where in 1650 he received a grant of land near the harbor where he could work at his trade, that of ship's carpenter. He died 29 Aug. 1659. His wife Mary Jenners Coit died 2 Jan. 1676 at the age of eighty.

Biographical Notes

John Calkins Coit was born 27 June 1799 at New London, Connecticut. He graduated at Yale College in 1818 and taught in the Female Academy at New London and Windham. In October 1821 he removed to South Carolina, and the following year established himself as a lawyer at Cheraw. On 16 April 1825 he was married at Cheraw to Anna Maria Campbell. She died at New London, Conn., while on a visit there to regain her health, 27 Sept 1831.

Mr. Coit joined the Presbyterian Church Society and was elected President 21 March 1831. The first business attended to was the appointment of a committee consisting of John C. Coit, L. Prince, A. McKenzie, and M. McLean to purchase a lot suitable on which to build a church. This building was constructed in the fall of 1831 and spring of 1832. When partially completed, a revival meeting was held at which a membership of 67 was attained. Among those admitted to membership were; Mary Ann Malloy, John Malloy, Duncan Malloy and Archibald Malloy.

In the spring of 1834 Mr. Coit became President of the Merchants' Bank, then recently established at Cheraw. While preparing for the return trip from a visit to his old home at New London, he was asked to chaperone Miss Ellen Phoebe North, a vivacious and witty girl of New London, who planned to visit her sister Maria Sybil North Mitchell (wife of Dr. Elisha Mitchell) at Chapel Hill North Carolina. During the trip south their acquaintance ripened into love, they were engaged, and were married 11 June 1834 on arrival at Dr. Mitchell's home in Chapel Hill. They later continued their journey south to Cheraw.

Mr. Coit was elected elder in the church in 1835. In the spring of 1837 he resigned as President of the Merchants' Bank and, having sold most of his stock in the bank, reinvested the funds in capital stock of several new banks then being organized in the Middle West, at St. Louis Missouri and Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Later these investments proved highly profitable and furnished him ample funds to raise and educate his children as well as make considerable donations to religious and other worthy causes. These investments in the North and West were particularly fortunate because most of such property held locally was swept away during the Civil War.

At this point, in order to avoid confusion, it should be stated that the probable reason why John C. Coit first went to Cheraw, South Carolina, was because his brother David Gardiner Coit, who was with him at Yale, and graduated in 1819, had preceded him there, and had begun the practice of medicine. Dr. David G. Coit died at Cheraw in 1837, leaving a son David Gardiner Coit Jr, who also later practiced medicine. He married Mary Malloy of Cheraw, and died in 1865 and is buried in St. David's Cemetery at Cheraw. One of his sons, Major James Campbell Coit, (known affectionately by the writer's father as "Cousin Jimmie") married Sarah McLean of Cheraw and had five children: John Coit (deceased in infancy), David Coit, Jennie, (now Mrs. Robert Coker of Chapel Hill, N.C., Mary of Washington, D.C., and Lucia, (now Mrs. W. H. Cross of Marion, S.C. This family lived in Cheraw until removing to Washington City in 1901. Inasmuch as town and church records so often give initials instead of full names, it is no easy matter to keep these two Coit families properly separated.

In the spring of 1838, having been an active and useful elder in the church since 1835, John C. Coit "had a feeling that he was called to preach the gospel". He applied to Harmony Presbytery for a license to preach. That body was so much impressed by his learning, earnestness and evident fitness, that the license was granted as being one of those extraordinary cases not requiring the usual course of study in a theological seminary. At the same time he received a call from the Presbyterian church of Cheraw to become its pastor, which call he accepted; was ordained and installed in 1838. He was the first pastor of the church, those preceeding him having been stated supplies. During his pastorate of 19 years Mr. Coit regularly turned back into the church treasury the major part of his salary.

There is a tradition that the Session house, completed in 1842 at a cost of $1122.04 was donated to the church by Rev. Mr. Coit. There is no evidence of this. The records do show that in 1856 the Session passed a resolution that the unpaid part of his salary be paid at that time. At the next meeting of the Session this was rescinded without explanation. It is most probable that Mr. Coit, still declining to accept the unpaid part of his salary, did give his approval to the suggestion that the session house be considered as a gift from him.

Rev. Mr. Coit's second wife Ellen Phoebe, having borne seven children in nine years died at the age of 31 on 15 Oct 1843 at Oakland which was the name of the Coit summer place in the "piney woods" near Cheraw. Mr. Coit married for the third time, Melinda Barge of Fayetteville, North Carolina 9 June 1846.

In 1856 Mr. Coit's health began to fail and he was forced to take a vacation of several months. On 24 March 1857 Mr. Coit asked that the church unite with him in requesting a dissolution of the pastoral relationship on account of ill health. This action was taken and his pastorate ended after 19 years of most harmonious work. There is recorded an official note in the Session record that for more than 18 years every matter that came before the Session was decided by unanimous vote save one, and that only on the reasons stated for the decision; and that the great harmony of the Session and of the church too, during his pastorate, is to be ascribed chiefly to his wisdom and Christian spirit.

John Calkins Coit's children were carefully brought up. The girls were trained in sewing and were well dressed, but went barefoot in summer except on Sunday. He was a rather strict disciplinarian, his demeanor bordering on the austere rather than the companionable toward his children. He provided for a regular private school for all young people under his roof. He had a rustic summer place in the country known as "Oakland" where they all went in hot weather. Toward his associates he was a jolly, kindly man with a big "haw-haw" laugh. He always dressed with meticulous care, shaving every day which was quite unusual for men in those days. He was large weighing over 200 pounds and full blooded. That fact, together with his disinclination to take adequate physical exercise, no doubt contributed to the failure of his health.

About 1859 Mr. Coit suffered financial reverses. A substantial loan made to an old friend at New London (a Mr. Day, after whom his daughter Martha was named) was never repaid. At the outbreak of the Civil War he bought heavily of Confederate bonds, which, of course were a total loss. Five of his sons; John T., William H., Henry W., Julius T., and George., all went to war. Mr. Coit was a violent champion of the Southern Cause. All these things, together with grief over the sudden death of his brilliant son Henry William, resulted in a nervous breakdown. During the last year of his life he was in a pitiable state of melancholia. His daughters took turns playing chess and checkers with him to keep his mind away from his and his country's troubles.

Thirteen years earlier, when John Calkins Coit was in his prime, he, at the request of the citizens of Cheraw, prepared, and on the 24 April 1850 delivered, a Eulogy on the "Life, Character, and Public Services of the late John C. Calhoun". In early life John C. Coit had been politically antagonistic to Mr. Calhoun, but had later come to greatly admire him. As an example of Mr. Coit's style and vigor as a speaker, a few brief excerpts are herewith presented from his 44 page Eulogy of Mr. Calhoun. (A copy of this publication is in the possession of the of the writer. Another copy is deposited in the library of the Presbyterian Foundation at Montreat, North Carolina.)

"Such was the condition of the world abroad and at home, when Mr. Calhoun first stood before the American people, as one of their rulers in the House of Representatives from South Carolina.

"Mr. Jefferson's policy to meet the exigencies of the times, had been the defense of the turtle. He wished to keep our people and property at home, within our own shell. It was the non-intercourse, the embargo, the gun-boat system. If he could, he would have made the waves of the Atlantic, flames of fire. He would have cut off his country and people from all intercourse with the old continent. It was the weakness of his administration that he endeavored to do so. Mr. Jefferson's mind was profoundly philosophic; yet had a vicious taint of idolatry, for his own idealisms and theories.

"Mr. Calhoun, who bowed with reverence to the sacred supremacy of truth, justice and honour; in dealing with men and nations, in the high concerns of international correspondence, politics and law; considered well the nature of the clay in his hands. He knew he was not a creator, but a potter; he therefore dealt with men and human affairs as they actually were; not like Mr. Jefferson, as though they were what his philosophy taught him they ought to be. Herein differed (as I conceive) these eminent statesmen. Mr. Calhoun received truths as facts and realities; acting on them, the works of his hands stand when the winds and storms come. Mr. Jefferson's foundation stones were too often the phantoms of his own imagination; and therefore the base of his works in places has caved in.

"There are in our day dreamers, as there were in the days of Mr. Jefferson, who dreamed that wars are wrong; though their dreams come from a different kind of imagination. Some now hold that war is in itself a moral evil; and that any degree of insult, injustice and oppression should be passively borne, rather than resort to the terrible ordeal of arms.

"I believe that among serious persons, this persuasion cometh from a confusion in their minds of the divine and human governments. The nature of these dominions is different and antagonistic. The one is purely spiritual; its subjects the spirits and spiritual powers, the minds and the hearts and thoughts, affections and passions of individual men. In this kingdom where the spirit of the Lord reigns by the scepter of his word over the soul, there love to God and man, and all the Christian graces flourish; and all envy, wrath, malice, resentment, contentious and personal fightings among the subjects of this kingdom, are inconsistent with its dominion. Here man has personally no rights; and his liberty consists in having an eye to see, an ear to hear, and a heart to understand and obey the word of the Lord. It is the kingdom of faith and patience, of passive, unresisting, meek obedience to the word and the providence of God. Here is a communion, through the Mediator, of Creator and creature, Redeemer and redeemed, Sanctifier and sanctified, Savior and sinner father and child. This is the kingdom of heaven; and though in this world is not of this world; and where this dominion is set up and reigns in the heart, there can be personally between its subjects nothing but mutual love; fightings and wars between them are excluded. Jesus answered Pilate, "My kingdom is not of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews".

"Here our master intimates that it is characteristic of the kingdom of this world that their subjects or citizens will fight; to save their king or sovereignty from captivity. And it was a doctrine held profoundly by Mr. Calhoun, that no earthly kingdom or state can maintain its proper rights of sovereignty, without there be in those to whom the sovereignty belongs, an understanding to know, a virtue to appreciate, and a spirit to maintain this royal prerogative, if need be by the sword. The imperial or crown rights of a State, or of her people, involve the high moral obligation to protect the lives, the property and honour of the subject or citizen. Mr. Calhoun was appointed one of the rulers of the state or kingdom of this world. In these kingdoms, falsehood, violence and rapacity reign among the people and among the nations: and his country was about to be made a prey and a spoil for them all".

The old family Bible used by Rev. John Calkins Coit at family prayers, morning and evening, was in two volumes. In it was recorded family marriages, births and deaths. Volume I is now in the possession of Harry Winthrop Malloy at his home, 416 S. Main St., Laurinburg, N.C. Volume II is now in the possession of Elizabeth Wilson Moore Brackett at her home at 2109 Alston Ave., Ft. Worth, Texas.

Mr. Malloy has kindly furnished photostatic copies of all vital statistics in Volume I. A selection of the most legible of the entries is presented herewith as an illustration of John C. Coit's handwriting.

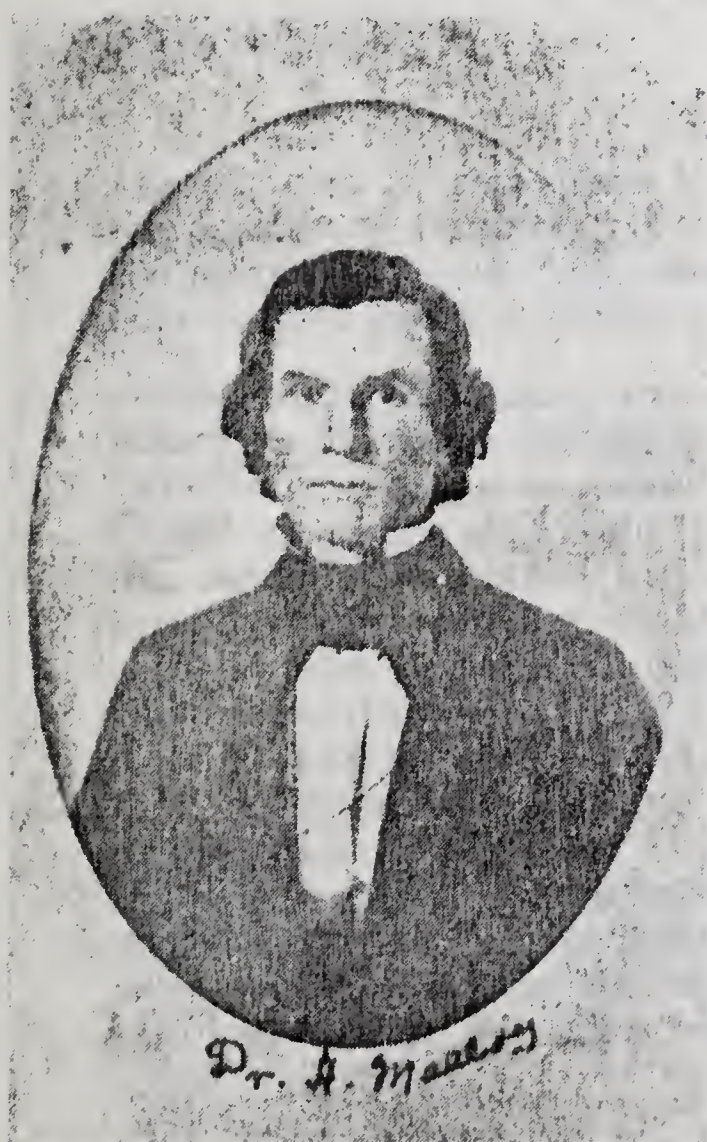

In this old Bible was found a sheet in John C. Coit's handwriting and dated August 1835. It is headed "Some of Henrietta's faults to be corrected". This was when Henrietta was nine years old, and listed ten faults, No. 2 of which is presented herewith.

Descendants From the First Marriage of John Calkins Coit

Anna Maria Campbell was the daughter of Robert and Justina Campbell of Hunt's Bluff, Marlboro County, S.C. Robert Campbell came to America as Captain in the British army in the American Revolution. At the end of the war he remained and became a citizen. His son, Captain Robert Campbell Jr., brother of Anne Maria served in the American army in 1812 under General Williams. He later was a member of Congress from South Carolina for a number of terms. He was then appointed Consul at Havana, Cuba, and later served as Consul at London, England until the outbreak of the Civil War.

John Calkins Coit and Anna Maria Campbell were married 16 April 1825 at Cheraw, S.C. She died 27 Sept 1831 at New London, where she had gone for the benefit of her failing health.

I. Henrietta Maria Coit Malloy

Daughter of John Calkins Coit and Anna Maria Campbell Coit. Born 24 Feb 1826 at Cheraw, S.C. Married 21 Dec 1843 Dr. Archibald A. Malloy at Cheraw, S.C. Died 19 May 1864 at Stewartsville, N.C.

First Presbyterian church at Cheraw. Built in 1831. Session house in the rear built in 1842.

She was educated at the exclusive boarding school of the Misses Mary R. and Helen M. Smith, located at No. 9, Washington Square, Philadelphia, Pa. Finishing in 1842, she visited with her relatives, Henry Coit in New York City and her aunt Charlotte Coit at New London, Conn.

Henrietta Coit Malloy was a noble woman of strong energetic character, fearless nature, intense enthusiasm, and unbounded generosity. She was small of stature, wearing No. 1 shoes. Gifted in art she delighted in oil painting, and when in a painting mood, shut herself up alone and could be interrupted by nobody. She bore nine children but found time for much public service. She was first President of the Cheraw Hospital Society. Her interest in the Southern Cause was without limit. Shortly after Secession, early in 1862, her brother William Coit, formed a company of soldiers and devoted himself to recruiting and drilling them for service. Mrs. Malloy constituted herself recruiting officer and could be seen early and late riding through the country, talking, urging, influencing men to join the ranks. Many were the men whom she won by her sweet gracious manner, and inspired by her great zeal and patriotism to enlist.

The Malloy home, known as the "Old McKay place" (the house where General La Fayette was entertained when he visited Cheraw on his last visit to the United States) was the first place of meeting for the "Daughters of the Confederacy" who worked arduously making uniforms and other clothing for the soldiers. In fact, this home became a depot for the outfitting of recruits.

Dr. Archibald A. Malloy's grandfather was John Malloy who came from Argylshire, Scotland to Cumberland County N.C. in 1760. His son Charles Malloy was married to Catherine Mc-

Home of Dr. Archibald A. and Henrietta Coit Malloy at Cheraw, S.C.

Millan of Lumberton, N.C., a granddaughter of Archibald McDuffie and grand niece of George McDuffie who was governor of South Carolina and U.S. Senator from South Carolina. Dr. Archibald A. Malloy was a most able and popular physician, his reputation and practice extending through all the upper Pee Dee section of South Carolina. He was born 4 Aug 1811, in Cumberland County N.C., and died at Cheraw 19 June 1864. He was buried in old St. David's churchyard in Cheraw.

*The location of the principal old Malloy cemetery, now owned and cared for by Harry W. Malloy of Laurinburg, N.C.; where some Malloy headstones date as far back as 1829, is on the old stage coach road between Fayetteville, N.C. and Cheraw, S.C. It is two miles north of Laurel Hill R.R. station and two miles south of Laurel Hill church. The plot of about two acres lies east of the road about 500 yards and is surrounded by plowed fields. Among the many Malloys interred here are Charles Malloy (d.1829) of Argyleshire, Scotland, and Catherine his wife. Also Dr. John Malloy (d.1867) and his wife Harriet D., daughter of Shockley D. Adams.

Graduated at Princeton University 26 June 1850. Studied law and practiced both law and civil engineering at Cheraw for a time. In 1858 he became enthused over the prospect of moving to Texas. He went to New Orleans, and from there by boat up the Mississippi and Red Rivers to near Jefferson, Texas. He bought a horse and rode over the country to Bonham, McKinney, and southward. He selected and bought a farm in the black soil area near what is now the northern edge of the city of Dallas. The following year he brought his wife and child to their new home. Farming in this pioneer country proved a hard struggle, and in order to add to the farm income, he moved into Dallas, was admitted to the bar 6 Aug 1859. His wife taught school in Dallas for a time. In 1862 he raised a regiment at Breckenridge, was made Lieut. Colonel of the 18th Texas Cavalry and assigned to duty with the Army of Tennessee. In one of the battles he was taken prisoner and carried into the North where he became critically ill. There, he was visited by his sister Martha (Mattie) Day Brown of Burdett, N.Y., who gave him money and clothing. Finally he was exchanged, and as Colonel, joined his old regiment, then at Vicksburg, in May 1863. As a result of a wound received later, he spent some time at Blackie Hospital near Birmingham, Ala. After partial recovery he was put on limited service and stationed at San Antonio as general enlisting officer. After the war he returned to his farm, but his health had been so broken by service he found farming too difficult, moved into Dallas and practiced law until the time of his death. His son Henry William operated the farm, and his grandson Henry Campbell Coit and his family now occupy and operate a part of the original Coit farm.

William Henry Coit

the "Citadel" (South Carolina Military Academy) at Charleston, S.C., which then ranked as the "West Point" of the South. For a while he taught at a military academy in South Carolina. At the outbreak of the war he organized a company of volunteers. This company, after being drilled and trained by Capt. Coit and furnished with homemade uniforms by a group of ladies led by his sister, Henrietta Malloy, offered its services to the Governor of the State. It was accepted and enrolled in the 8th Regiment of Confederate Volunteers. Original officers of this company were: Capt. W. H. Coit, 1st Lieut. Thomas E. Powe, 2nd Lieut. David McIver, 3rd Lieut. Rob Evans, Orderly Sergeant Theo F. Malloy. Capt. Coit served one year with this company, after which he was transferred to the artillery and organized "Coit's Battery" with which he fought under Generals Longstreet and Hood all through the war. He took part in many battles in central Virginia and the Shenandoah Valley, including the invasion of Pennsylvania and the battle of Gettysburg, in which he took full part. He surrendered with Lee's army at Appomattox, April 9, 1865.

After the surrender Capt. Coit was paroled and allowed to retain his horse. He rode south and stopped at Salisbury, N.C., May 20-25, to visit with the family of Dr. J. J. Summerell. For a while he engaged in mercantile business in South Carolina. After marriage, he and his wife went to Poughkeepsie, N.Y., where he attended business college in 1868. Returning to Mayesville, S.C., he taught school (conducted Coit's Military and Commercial Academy) 1869-72. In October 1872 he removed with his family to Texas where he taught school at various places, principally at San Antonio, and lastly at Dallas where he owned a farm. Selling this farm, he acquired another near Temple, Oklahoma, where he resided at the time of his death.

During the war Capt. Coit wrote many long and highly interesting letters home, including one describing the death in battle of his brother George E. Coit who was only a few feet from him when struck in the chest by an unexploded shell. Also a very excellent account of the battle of Gettysburg, during all of which his battery was in full action. Seventy of these letters are well preserved, and are now in the possession of his great nephew, David Coit Elliott, at Washington, D.C. Typewritten copies of all of them are in possession of his son, John Eliot Coit.

I. George Erasmus Coit

Son of John Calkins Coit and Ellen Phoebe North Coit. Born 21 April 1839 at Cheraw, S.C. Killed in battle 13 May 1863 at Orange, Va. George E. Coit was a fine young man, 24 years of age, serving as Lieutenant in Coit's Battery; his brother William Henry being the Captain. He was instantly killed by being struck by an unexploded shell, in a battle near Orange Court House, Va. Several of his letters home have been preserved. In one dated Sept 23 1862, at Martinsburg, Va., he says: "In artillery service our men have a better chance to carry their rations than they do in the infantry; but in all branches of the service the soldiers have seen hard times since our march from Orange Court House began. Often the men would be two or three days without anything to eat but green corn and apples, and then making long marches, wading rivers, climbing mountains to fight hard battles."

Capt. Wm. H. Coit, his brother, was only a few feet from him when he was killed and wrote home the following account: "Not a great while before George was shot, General Law was sitting on one of our guns, and George and I were standing near talking with him when a heavy column of the enemy advanced upon us. The General ordered us to open fire and we immediately poured it into them until ordered to cease firing. When the smoke of our guns had cleared away the enemy had disappeared. While we were firing and for some time afterward we were exposed to a tremendous shelling from the artillery of the enemy. George had ascertained that they were firing at us with seven second shells, which showed that they were out of our reach. He ascertained this by noting the difference by his watch between the flashes of their guns and the bursting of their shells over our heads. Not long after we had ceased firing, George was standing in the rear of his gun talking to Sergt. Wilson when suddenly an unexploded shell grazed the top of our breastwork and struck him in the side, killing him instantly. Corporal Haynesworth was on the lookout, and seeing the flash of the enemy gun, and the shell coming gave the word "Look out!" George stooped and had his left arm bent with his hand about his ear. The shell cut his left arm entirely off, his body half in two and his right arm nearly off. It is a terrible trial for me to give you these awful particulars, but I know you are anxious to know all. Poor fellow! If he had only jumped forward or laid down, he would not have been touched. Although his body was so terribly mangled he was brought to Franklin where we laid him out and washed his face. His countenance was as natural as life. There was no expression of pain, and he looked as though dreaming a pleasant dream. Poor, poor Georgie! I hope he is now in heaven with our Dear Father, Dear Brother Henry, and the dear little ones of our family, much happier than we are here in this awful sinful world. May God grant that these sore and heartrending afflictions which we are called upon to endure may be sanctified to our eternal good and may he give us grace sufficient to enable us to do his will."

Signed William Henry Coit. In camp May 15, 1863.
